Letter from Mrs Duniway.

PORTLAND, April 15, 1873.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

I need "two papers, both daily " So many items of interest crowd upon me continually, and so accustomed have I been for the past two years, to having a little to say about everything that goes on, that my fingers tingle to get back to their normal condition as pencil drivers; but as my term of editorial vacation will not expire for some weeks to come, I shall look to my contemporaries for such avenues of effervescence as they may deem necessary to prevent my otherwise pent up cogitations from exploding by a sort of spontaneous combustion.

How glad I was to see in this morning's OREGONIAN a few brave, human words over the unhappy fate of Hon. A. B. Meacham. And now that the vituperation of the press and people has exhausted itself, allow me, as an intimate friend of Mr. M. and family, to tender a few feeble words to that same press and people in his behalf.

The practice of removing officials from places of trust without giving them sufficient notification of such intention, to enable them to leave their public business in such a shape as would satisfy themselves, is disastrous to the peace and sensitiveness of an honorable citizen, and it is, or ought to be, presumed that all officials are honest until by their conduct they are proven otherwise. At the time of Mr. Meacham's removal from office the affairs of his department were in the same confused condition in which Superintendent Huntington and others had found and conducted them, and it had not been in Mr. M.'s power, with the means placed at his disposal, to prevent an overplus in one direction from being temporarily appropriated to supply a deficiency in another. This was the head and front of his offending, and every fibre of his sensitive soul was nerved to indignation and grief by his sudden ejection, under what seemed to him deep circumstances of disgrace, from a position where he felt that he was accomplishing a great and needed moral work among the Indians. That the Indians themselves were exasperated over his removal, the Methodist Conference knows well; and while Superintendent Odeneal, as his successor, has done nobly, and is in every way worthy of public and private confidence, I, for one, emphatically declare my belief that had Mr. Meacham been continued in office without interruption in his influence over the Modocs, the unhappy slaughter which has caused so much grief, consternation and indignation would have been prevented.

I do not place these thoughts before the people because I think they will be popular, but because I believe them to be true; and if our nation would learn the proper discrimination between financial discretion and moral suasion, (a difference which Meacham saw, but was powerless to use for good until his moral influence over the Indians had abated through his removal) many an opportunity for the prevention of crime, as well as economy of public expenditure, might be embraced that is not. I, however, had no confidence in the success of the Peace Commission. It deserved the condemnation it received; not because Meacham's heart was not right in the matter, but because, during his separation from the Indians, he had lost a certain psycological power over them in which he still had confidence. But it may be, that even as I write, the dark shadow of the wing of the archangel of death is settling over his brow; but whether he shall seal his fidelity to his convictions with the close of his mortal career, or shall be spared to be, as in times past, the stay and shield of his own family and that of a departed brother, alike dependent upon his strong arm for support in their grief and helplessness, let me urge our citizens, as we all drop tears of sorrow over the remains of the illustrious dead, whose bodies come back to us as a mournful emblem of their fidelity to the people, to remember, in kindness and pity, the afflicted ones who mourn another sacrifice. And as Hon. A. B. Meacham was the only one of the many instigators of the great disaster, falsely called a Peace Commission, who had the bravery to seal his convictions with his blood, let us at least honor his devotion to principle, and visit our anathemas, in futuro, upon the supporters of the policy who kept themselves secluded from danger.

A. J. D.

The New York Herald says: Unreasonable verdicts and perverse journeymen are not monopolized by New York. A man has just been tried at Bordeaux for murdering his wife, her father, mother and two of his children. He was a country postman in the wild flats of "the Landes," and addicted to drink. He went apparently to sleep under the influence of liquor at the post office, twenty-four miles from his house. That night all his family were killed except two children. The eldest, a boy eight years old, says his father was the criminal; that after butchering the others he came to his bed and shook him, the frightened child pretending to be asleep. In the morning the postman was seen still asleep in the post office. No other evidence was brought against him than that of the child, who, though contradicting himself upon some points under cross-examination, stuck firmly to the assertion of his recognition of his father as the perpetrator of the monstrous crime. On this testimony the jury returned a verdict of "Guilty, with extenuating circumstances," which condemns him to hard labor for life. What could have been the intent of this jury it is difficult to guess. Either the prisoner was guilty or he was not. If he committed the act a death penalty would be light in comparison with the deserts. If there was doubt of the fact he was entitled to an acquittal. On what grounds, if guilty, could he be considered worthy of the merciful consideration of the court? Clearly these jurors are of the sort who never read newspapers, and thus come with blank minds to do justice between the community and the prisoner at the bar.

A Story of Thiers.

Apropos of M. Thiers, a very amusing story is going the rounds of Paris now, said to have been told of himself by the President at one of his last receptions. M. Thiers was walking, one morning lately, alone in the new camp which he has established near Versailles at Villeneuve l'Etang. He saw a soldier stationed on guard and at the moment vigorously engaged in eating bread and cheese.

"Good morning, mon garcon," said M. Thiers.

"Good morning, ma petite vielle" (my little old woman), replied the soldier.

"Eh bien! You don't get tired, do you, of your camp life?"

"That depends on the hour. At present, not. I am off duty, and am eating my bread and cheese, as you see."

"And the camp bread, it's good, isn't it? I find it far superior to that they gave us before."

"Tiens! Do you eat it? What are you, then? Are you an oil merchant or a hospital nurse?"

"Better than that," replied M. Thiers.

"Bah! Then you're a second lieutenant."

"Better than that."

"Captain?"

"Better than that."

"General?"

"Better than that; I'm the President of the republic."

"You are Thiers! Sacrebleu! Then, quick, hold my bread and cheese so I can present arms to you!"—New York World.

OREGON.

The parties arrested at Baker City last week for the murder of Geo. Horner were discharged and not held to answer as published by one of the papers in this city.

The directors of the Albany and Santiam Ditch Company held a meeting yesterday, Tuesday, to determine upon the work to be done the coming spring and summer.

Trade is said to be quite active in Baker City this spring, and a considerable rush of people is expected there. On the 10th inst. the weather was still quite cold and cloudy.

The epizooty in Baker county is said to deal more gently than usual with the equine race. As yet but one mule has kicked the bucket, and it was thought that was because there was nothing else near his heels.

A man near Aumsville, Marion county, by the name of Durby lost his reason Thursday. Mr. Durby's mind has been affected annually for several years past, and has never been entirely cured. He is now a raving maniac, and will probably be sent to the asylum in a few days.

A letter from Mr. Thomas Sweeney, of Nehalem valley, dated April 6th, gives full particulars of the drowning of Patrick Adams in that valley a few days before. Mr. Adams who was stopping with Mr. Sweeney had a claim across the river to which he usually went in a canoe, but had not become expert in managing the craft. On the morning in question Mr. Adams started to cross the river, and had almost reached the shore opposite Mr. Sweeney's house when he was thrown out of the canoe, sank and was seen no more. The water of the stream was high, but where he fell out could have been but little over his head. Mr. Sweeney saw him fall in, and watched his struggles in the water, but had no means to aid him. The next morning his body was found a short distance below, his hands grasping the brush. A proper burial was given by the neighbors.

The Statesman of the 15th says: "Pursuant to call a number of gentlemen met Saturday afternoon in the Legislative Hall, for the purpose of forming a Society of Natural History. Hon. S. F. Chadwick was chosen Chairman and Syl. C. Simpson, Secretary. Rev. Mr. Bowers proposed a Constitution and By Laws for a society to be called the Oregon Society of Natural History, which was adopted section by section. The society then effected a permanent organization by the election of the following officers, to-wit: Hon. S. F. Chadwick, President; Prof. T. M. Gatch, First Vice President; Syl. C. Simpson, Second Vice President; Rev. S. Bowers, Secretary; and Rev. W. R. Stewart, treasurer. The election of the remaining officers was deferred until the next meeting, to be held at 8 o'clock P. M., on the second Tuesday in May, at the Legislative Hall.

Our Baker City correspondent, writing under date of April 10th, sends the following in regard to the mines of Eastern Oregon: "I have just returned from a trip across the mountains to Eldorado and Malheur City. Found things looking up in those camps, aside from a little free water. The miners have but fifty inches water coming in through the old Reeves Ditch, but report says water is coming down the Big Ditch, and when that gets in times will be better. At Malheur the Kirkpatrick Ditch furnishes quite a stream which is gobbled up immediately at twenty-five cents per inch first head. Already quite a large quantity of gold dust has been washed up in these two camps with the free snow water. The season is at least one month behind last year. Your correspondent traveled over eighty miles in snow from two to three feet deep between Powder and Burnt rivers in the mountains. Mr. Harvey Johnson, Superintendent Eldorado Ditch Co., returned from Chicago last evening to resume charge of the Chicago Co.'s ditch. It is said that this Company intend to redeem their property from recent Sheriff's sale to Carter & Packwood. Packwood and Stewart have recently struck a rich deposit of decomposed quartz in their mine at Hog 'Em, and enough of it in sight to make a poor man laugh."

THE TERRITORIES.

The Indian Balm Oil man has reached Olympia.

Fourteen persons were received into the Episcopal Church at Walla Walla during the month of March.

The Transcript says that Mr. C. C. Finkbonner has resigned the situation of Farmer on the Lummi Indian Reservation.

Three of Olympia's oldest citizens, Mr. S. Galliher, Mr. J. H. Kellett and Mrs. Guthrie, are all lying dangerously ill at that place.

The District Court, Judge Greene presiding, convened at Vancouver yesterday morning. At noon the grand jury had been empanneled and returned one indictment.

Mr. Ragsdale has retired from the editorial management of the Spirit of the West, but retaining the proprietorship will devote his time to the business affairs of the paper.

The Indians who have been hanging around Boise City all winter, chopping and doing chores for old clothes, grub and whisky, and occasionally stealing small articles, have all decamped.

The Olympia Transcript says travel Puget Soundward has greatly increased of late and the stages from Tenino come in with full loads every day. Mr. Coggan is accommodating the public with good conveyances and making coin for himself.

It is stated that the title to the insane asylum grounds at Steilacoom is not vested in the Territory. It appears that the bill for this purpose passed both houses of Congress, but failed to receive the signature of the President, and therefore is not a law.

The Federal Commissioner of mining statistics estimates the yield of gold and silver of Montana, for the year 1872, at $6,073,339. The amount falls below that of the previous year by nearly two million dollars—the product being for the year 1871, $8,050,000.

A singular fish was caught at Olympia the other day. It is of a light senna color, and is a mass of legs, arms and claws, closely resembling sea moss, and apparently has no bones in the body. It is quite lively and keeps continually twisting and squirming about. It has no discernable head or eyes, and it is in fact what might be called a "what-is-it."

On the first of next month (May) there will be a race over the King county course between Pennell's horse Jack Cade, and Rose's mare Trifle, for $500. The purse put up amounts to $250, and the entrance will be $250 more each, one half of which will go to the winning animal, so making up the $500. These horses ran together last fall, and Trifle was beaten.

There are eleven Territories, two or three of which are twice or three times as large as all of New England, and it is a small Territory that is not at least ten times as large as Massachusetts. Colorado is thirteen times as large as Massachusetts while Dakota and Arizona are each as large again as Colorado. The eleven Territories contain over one million and a quarter acres, exceeding by nearly two hundred thousand square miles the aggregate territory of all the present admitted States of the Union. The Territory of Alaska contains 369,529,600 acres.

Vice-President Wilson called on the Secretary of the Treasury the other day, and notified him that he would not accept the back-pay on his salary as Senator.

CALIFORNIA.

From San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 15.—The report that Miss Lizzie Gannon, who shot at C. P. McDermott, had forfeited her bail and left the city, proved to be incorrect. She was not informed of the day of arraignment and the fact that she was not present led to the report. To-day is fixed for her trial in the municipal court.

R. D. Bogart will have a hearing before the U. S. Circuit Court at 11 A. M.

The weather is very pleasant, but rain is much needed.

Hon. Amasa Walker, of Massachusetts, will address the Chamber of Commerce Thursday on Finance, with special reference to the monetary and commercial interests of California.

The body of the man found in the Bay on Sunday, has been identified as that of Joseph Glover, drowned near Alcatraz, March 23d.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 15.—The habeas corpus case of R. D. Bogart came before the U. S. Circuit Court to-day, Judge Sawyer and Hoffman presiding. Mr. Pixley, of counsel for Bogart, stated that Col. Hoge is engaged before the Supreme Court in the tax case, and suggested that it might be convenient to postpone the matter a few days to permit his attendance. Mr. Latimer said the case is a very simple one, and the absence of one of the counsel seemed no sufficient excuse for a continuance. He desired to proceed immediately, for the court would take cognizance of the fact that a court martial has been convened at Mare Island to try the defendant and is now in session. Judge Sawyer said the counsel had answered and he had upon that statement discharged the jury. He directed that if counsel had any preliminary matters to dispose of, they must proceed. In the meantime, Col. Hoge might arrive. Amended petition, order and return to the writ, were substituted for the original papers in the case by stipulation of counsel. Latimer contended that the Court could not enquire whether the prisoner is guilty; whether he was acquitted or convicted before, or whether the statute of limitations runs against the offense with which he is charged. He then read the original orders by Robeson, containing the charges that Bogart embezzled $10,000 of the money of the United States, and is also guilty of desertion from the navy. Latimer said he is prepared to prove by witnesses that Bogart stole $10,000 from a safe on board the receiving ship Vermont and fled to Canada, where he lived under an assumed name. Large rewards were offered for his arrest, and he was finally arrested. He paid his captors a large amount of money to let him go, and fled next to Texas, where he again went under an assumed name, but was arrested and returned to New York for trial. These matters were properly triable by a court martial, and could not be legally inquired into here. Harrison, for the prisoner, contended that the Court can properly inquire into any fact or circumstance which could show that he was held in contravention of any rights under the constitution and laws. The Court took a recess till half-past two, P. M.

Lizzie Gannon, under arrest for shooting at McDermott, was arraigned in the municipal court to-day, and pleaded not guilty.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 15.—John Samuel, who shot and killed H. A. Marchant, has been held to answer before the grand jury. His two daughters visited him in the prison to-day.

The Board of Harbor Commissioners met this afternoon to receive bids for leases of the wharves along the city front. The prices were generally high.

The members of the family of the late Dr. Thomas, who was murdered by the Modocs, will leave with Gov Blaisdell to-morrow, to receive the remains at Redding.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 15.—The Bogart habeas corpus case was not concluded this evening and will be resumed to-morrow morning.

A fire occurred this evening on Union street, near Battery, in the cooperage establishment of I. P. Meyers. The building was nearly destroyed. Loss $3,000, with an insurance of $2,000.

The weather has been very warm all day, and this evening is hot and sultry.

INTERIOR CALIFORNIA DISPATCHES.

CHICO, April 15.—The epizootic made its appearance here to-day in the livery stables. All the horses are affected, but in a very mild form.

LOS ANGELES, April 15.—Borate discoveries are reported in every direction. Two borax districts have been formed in San Bernardino county, at Camp Cady and the Salt ponds.

MODESTO, Cal., April 15.—A fatal shooting affray occurred to-day between two Mexicans, named Cledornino Soto and Vanstena Medina, at San Joaquin, 12 miles west of this place, resulting in the death of the latter. Soto claims that Medina attacked him with a knife, when he shot him (Medina) through the heart. He gave himself up this afternoon. The trouble was about a woman.

Crops are looking moderately well. Farmers generally consider grain in no danger from lack of rain.

SAN ANDREAS, April 15.—A fire occurred this afternoon at 5 o'clock, on St. Charles street. Ten buildings were entirely destroyed, with their contents. Several other buildings were partially destroyed. Loss about $8,000. But a small amount insured.

YREKA, April 15.—The epizootic is fast coming this way. About half the horses in the upper end of Shasta valley are down now though in mild form.

Weather delightful.

The Recovery of Jerusalem.

The Edinburgh Review has an article on "The Recovery of Jerusalem," briefly reviewing the results of recent explorations in that city. The writer thus speaks of the magnitude of Solomon's Temple:

The skill, the art, the mighty toil, that have been devoted to the adornment, and to the desecration, of this most ancient place of worship, have been of extraordinary magnitude. The grandest legacy of Egyptain antiquity, the Great Pyramid, demanded, indeed, a larger amount of naked human labor; but in Moriah there is a compulsion of the features of Nature herself to the service of the builder. In actual bulk, the Great Pyramid is to the Temple rock as five to nine, if we descend but as far as the sills of the five double gates of the Mountain of the house. If we carry the comparison down to the level at which the lowest foundations of the walls is inlaid in the rock at the angles of the inclosure the bulk is three times that of the Great Pyramid. The cubic contents of the mason's work may not amount to a tenth part of that piled up by Souphis. But the hill has been honeycombed with chambers and galleries; and the declining part to the south covered with vaults and arches, to which Gizeh can show no parallel. No merely artificial structure could have so successfully resisted the resolute efforts of the two greatest military nations of the ancient world to destroy its existence and obliterate its memory. No other monument, long surviving the era of Asiastic and Italian power can ever, like the noble Sanctuary, mark by its very ruins, the successive periods of its glory and its fall!

If we regard not so much the evidence of the labor devoted to the work of the Temple as the effect produced on the mind by its apparent magnitude, we may suggest the following comparisons: The length of the eastern wall of the Sanctuary is rather more than double that of one side of the Great Pyramid. Its height, from the foundation on the rock at the south, and near the northern angles, was nearly a third of that of the Egyptian structure. If to this great height of 152 feet of solid wall be added the descent of 114 feet to the bed of the Kedron, and the further elevation of 160 feet attained by the pinnacle of the Temple porch, we have a total height of 426 feet, which is only 59 feet less than that of the Great Pyramid. The area of the face of the eastern wall is more than double that of one side of the pyramid. Thus the magnitude of the Noble Sanctuary of Jerusalem far exceeded that of any other temple in the world. Two amphitheaters of the size of the Coliseum would have stood within its colossal girdle, and left room to spare. The Coliseum is said to have seated 87,000 spectators, and accommodated 22,000 more in its arena and passages. For such a number to have been crammed within its circle, the space for each person must have been limited to 17 inches by 20 inches. Allowing two cubits each way, or four square cubits for each worshipper in the temple, the Sanctuary would have contained 30,000; the Chel, excluding the Priests Court 20,000 more, and there would yet have been room in the Great Court and the cloisters to make the total reach to more than 210,000.

A Wisconsin paper says that General Sherman's famous horse Lexington, which he rode "from Atlanta to the sea," died in Madison, Wis., on the 12th of March. Gen. Sherman gave him to Col. Thomas Reynolds, of Madison, five years ago, after he had sustained some injury. Colonel Reynolds passed him over to the Regents of Wisconsin University, and there he has since remained.

From Bayone comes a rumor that Menatti Garibaldi has offered his services at Barcelona to lead troops against the Carlists.

From Headquarters in Lava Be

DEATH OF LIEUT. SHERWOOD.

Brave Words from General Gille

CONDITION OF MR. MEACHAM.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 15.—The following has been received to-day:

HEADQUARTERS TULE LAKE,
April 14th, 1873.

Lieut. Sherwood, of the Twenty-first Infantry, died at 1 o'clock to-day, of wounds received on the 11th inst., while receiving a flag of truce from the Indians.

Seventy-two Warm Spring Indians, under Donald McKay, arrived in camp east of the Modoc position last night. The army will close on the Indians' position to-morrow, and endeavor to cut off all escape. No effort will be spared to make the punishment of the Indians severe. If possible, no Indian shall boast that he or his ancestors murdered Gen. Canby.

(Signed) ALVAN C. GILLEM

YREKA, Cal., April 15.—The regular courier arrived from headquarters at 5 o'clock this evening, having left there at 10 A. M. yesterday. Up to that time there had been no fighting, except a slight skirmish on Col. Mason's picket line on the 12th, resulting in one dead Indian and the capture of ten ponies. The Warm Spring scouts arrived on the 13th. They would be armed yesterday, and beyond a doubt the troops moved into the lava bed last night or to day.

Yesterday morning, while the signal officers were engaged between Gen. Gillem's headquarters and Col. Mason's camp, a Modoc got upon a ridge near Jack's cave with a white rag on a pole, and imitated the movements of the signal officers, waving it to and fro.

Lieut. W. L. Sherwood died at one o'clock yesterday morning from wounds received while officer of the day, receiving a flag of truce.

Mr. Meacham's condition is more hopeful.

Mr. Dyar, the Commissioner who was unhurt, telegraphs to Washington for instructions, saying it is useless to try longer for peace with those Indians. There is no doubt but the Modocs expected to get Gillem and Col. Mason. Gen. Gillem expected to have been present at the council but on the morning of the massacre was too indisposed to leave his tent. It is now stated that both Generals Canby, Gillem and the Commissioners talked about Riddle's warning, and came to the conclusion that it was only a ruse of Riddle's to delay negotiations. It is also stated that they had not the most confidence in Riddle's veracity, but on this occasion it seems he was right in his supposition.

The surgeons report Mr. Meacham's wounds to be a gunshot wound of the right forearm, a gunshot wound of the left index finger, also one of the right ear, a lacerated wound of the forehead and nose, and the wound of the scalp, six inches in length, caused by an attempt to scalp him.

THE MODOC TREACHERY.

From the Statesman of yesterday we take the following dispatches:

YREKA, April 13, 1873.
Received at Salem, 9 A. M., 14th.

Gov. Grover: A half hour before the massacre of Canby and Thomas, Indians approached Col. Mason's camp on east of lava bed with white flag and sent word for Mason to come and talk. Lieutenant Sherwood, officer of the day, accompanied by Lieutenant Boyle, went to them, when the Indians fired on them. Sherwood was shot through the arm and had his thigh broken. His wounds will probably prove fatal. Not known positively, but supposed the army commenced to move into lava bed last night. Warm Spring Indians would reach Gillem's camp last night. It is believd a decisive battle, if not already fought, will be in a day or two. Major Anderson, of Gen. Canby's staff, left headquarters yesterday at noon, with remains of Canby and Thomas, and arrived here at 4 P. M. to day. Meacham's recovery doubtful. Shot twice in the head.

ROAD TO LINKVILLE CLOSED.

JACKSONVILLE, April 14, 1873,
Received at Salem 11:30 A. M., 14th.

Gov. Grover: Road to Linkville dangerous. Settlers warned and travel stopped. What shall be done with guns? Are at Jenny Creek.

J. E. ROSS

A COMPANY OF MOUNTAIN VOLUNTEERS CALLED OUT.

Upon receipt of this telegram Gov. Grover ordered Gen. Ross to raise a company of mountain volunteers forthwith, and to open the road from Jacksonville to Linkville and take the guns mentioned at Jenny Creek and proceed to the relief of the settlers in Klamath Lake basin.

The guns mentioned were forty eight needle guns, with 300 rounds of ammunition, on their way to the Lake basin, which by order of the Governor issued a month ago in anticipation of difficulties had been directed to be placed in the hands of settlers in the most exposed localities.

REQUISITION FOR ARMS.

The Governor telegraphed yesterday to Senators Kelly and Mitchell to obtain an order from the War Department for 500 needle guns to be turned over to this State from the nearest arsenal. Two hundred of which are already due on former requisition, and the balance to be credited on future quotas due the State. The State is now out of breech-loading rifles, which is the only arm fit to be sent to the frontiers.

FAVORABLE REPORT CONCERNING MR. MEACHAM.

YREKA, CAL., April 13th, 1873.

Mrs. A. B. Meacham: Courier from the front arrived this afternoon. Your husband is doing well and will survive his injuries.

O. P. S. PLUMMER.

The above telegram was received at Roseburg, by Mrs. Meacham, on the 13th, and sent to Salem by her request.

WEDNESDAY MORNING APRIL 16, 1873

The School Tax

The meeting appointed by law to consider the business matters of this school district and to dispose of all questions affecting the security of the school—to adopt the plans of the school—which held last Monday evening and adjourned to the evening of Monday April [illegible] at which time it will proceed to all the business lawfully coming before the taxpayers will hold the place and the office of [illegible] will pass into the hands of the three who for the year ensuing. The meeting, however, did not adjourn till it had laid out a considerable amount of work for its final session and that too of the most important character. The estimate of the expenses for the year reported at the meeting contemplate the levying of a special tax upon the district of four mills upon the dollar of taxable property. The levy by the county for school purposes was raised by the last Legislature from two mills on the dollar to three so that the proposed levy by the district would be equivalent to five mills, besides the two mills heretofore levied by the county for school purposes. In other words, a levy of four mills this year will be the same rate of taxation as a levy of five mills last year. Five mills, the rate of last year, was unless we mistake the highest tax ever levied by the district. There were peculiar and unusual expenses to be met during the year in the nature of erecting and improvement of school buildings. The large and very expensive building of the Central School was erected during the year, and of course, augmented the tax rate very considerably. No such improvements are contemplated during the present year. Indeed, we have little doubt that the Directors and the taxpayers generally will agree that it is the part of prudence to expend no money on buildings this year. This item alone it would seem, might enable the district to pass through the year with some reduction of its local taxes. We shall refer to other matters in connection with the taxes hereafter.

The Illinois Legislature has passed a bill for restraining striking workmen from interfering with non-strikers, which has been approved by the Governor and is now a law. The first section of the law provides that "if any person shall, by threat intimidation or unlawful interference, seek to prevent any other person from working, or from obtaining work, at any lawful business on any terms that he or she may see fit, such person so offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $100. The second section provides that "if two or more persons shall combine for the purpose of depriving the owner or possessor of property of its lawful use or management or of preventing, by threats, suggestions of danger, or any unlawful means, any person or persons from being employed by, or obtaining employment from any such owner or possessor of property, on such terms as the parties concerned may agree upon, such persons so offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $500, or imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding six months."

A day or two since we mentioned the fact that the Local Option (Prohibitory Liquor) measure had been defeated in Pennsylvania. There were grave doubts as to the constitutionality of the proposed law, and some of the journals of that State seemed to think that the election was influenced greatly by these doubts. It is now said, however, that the Constitutional Convention has adopted an amendment prohibiting the sale of "intoxicating liquors, or mixtures thereof containing the same, for use as a beverage," and directing the Legislature, within one year from the adoption of the Constitution, to enact laws with adequate penalties for the enforcement of this provision. This amendment is to be submitted to a popular vote and thus the question of prohibition, freed from the embarrassments of doubtful constitutionality, will come before the people, to be decided on its merits. It is thought that there will be an unusually large vote in favor of a stringent liquor law.

The Washington Chronicle says that the trial of Capt Hardwick, Chief of Police of Lynchburg, for violation of the Enforcement Act, has just been concluded. It appears that Captain Hardwick caused to be formed two lines of voters at the polls in the last election, in one of which all colored voters were obliged to stand, while in the other all whites were placed. The defendant claimed that this system of two lines was instituted by a Federal officer in that city and its working has been entirely acceptable to all parties—so much so, that it was followed at the recent Presidential election at all precincts. The Judge charged the jury that the act of Capt Hardwick was illegal, and riot and bloodshed had better ensue than that a distinction should be made between the two races. On Wednesday the jury reported that they were unable to agree on a verdict and were discharged, the colored members of the jury being for conviction and the white members for acquittal.

John Alexander and Allen C. Walker, both large stockholders in the Knickerbocker Life Insurance Company have made application to a New York court to have the affairs of the corporation placed in the hands of a receiver. The complainants affidavits upon which action is based allege that the liabilities of the Knickerbocker exceed its assets by nearly $400,000. It is charged that the officers of the company have been guilty of gross mismanagement and corruption; that $12,000 was paid to Superintendent Miller for a favorable report on the condition of the company's affairs; $2,000 to Eldridge, Miller's assistant; $1,212 to Elezer Wright and $5,000 to the publishers of the Spectator for two articles defending the company. Charles Stanton President, is the principal party attacked. The complaint asks that he be removed and compelled to pay the large deficit. The case is attracting considerable attention in the East.

The Cincinnati Commercial of recent date publishes a letter from M. D. Conway in which the writer says that the petrified body of Mazzini the Italian statesman has been exhibited to his worshippers in Genoa. Those who have seen it say that the body has, in the process become much shorter and the face has a dull, leaden hue ghastly to look upon. The eyes partly open—affect the beholder fearfully. The physicians who have done the work declare that in process the color will change, and the appear[illegible] ble that pure marble which they [illegible] will be in operation.

NEW PUBLICATIONS

Hon P. W. Gillette, who has taken great interest in the dissemination of reliable information concerning the State of Oregon, has placed on our table a copy of Oregon as It Is by W. L. Adams, [illegible]. It is a pamphlet of [illegible] pages and contains as much valuable information put up in the most readable style as can be packed into that amount of space. Mr. Adams is one of the old Oregonians who have witnessed the growth of the country from its infancy. For many years a citizen of one of the leading counties, [illegible] always [illegible] cognizant of the [illegible] peculiarities of every section and a close observer of whatever might in any manner connect with the prospects of the future condition of the young commonwealth, at which this pamphlet was probably better qualified to do the subject justice without overdrawing the picture than any other man in the State. A cursory examination of the work impresses us that it is not below what would naturally be expected from such a source. It is written in the form of a letter in response to a correspondent who has made inquiries about this country with a view to immigration hither and is in that free and easy familiar style to which private correspondence is so well adapted. It gives full particulars as to the soil, climate, productions, [illegible] mountains, lakes, rivers, harbors—in fact everything of the State and what is most important it is reliable. There is no exaggeration. What is disagreeable as well as that which is pleasant in connection with living in Oregon, is told without concealment or prevarication. The writer shows his partiality for Oregon, it is true, but he shows that there exists the best of grounds for such partiality by comparing Oregon with other States and showing from actual statistics, that for all classes of people who expect to depend upon industry and enterprise for success Oregon offers greater inducements than any other country in America. All things considered we regard this little brochure as the best for the purpose it is designed to accomplish of all the numerous books on Oregon issued. It is neither too long to be read nor too short to be satisfactory, neither too prosy to beguile away the tedium of an idle hour nor too vivacious for a book of practical facts. The mechanical work upon this pamphlet is not of the best though by no means of the worst.

A small and unpretending volume in blue and gold, entitled Pay Day at Babel, by Robert Burton Rodney, is handed us by Geo. A. Steel & Co booksellers. Its author discloses, in some prefatory remarks, that he is a descendant of a person who was a relative of Cæsar A. Rodney and is a relative of a great many other first class persons of the same name. He does not tell how he obtained his first name "Robert Burton," but it is perhaps safe to say that his ancestors were of the family of the famous laughing philosopher who proved that he could be the greatest pedant, if not the greatest scholar, of his day, by publishing "The Anatomy of Melancholy." But this descendant of so gorgeous an ancestry is not of the class that can be satisfied with meditating upon the greatness of an ancestral name and never aspire to do anything worthy of the nobility to which they have been born. Pay Day at Babel is a poem, or rather a dramatic combination and has real merit. The scene is laid, as the name suggests, on the plains of Shinar, and the first speaker, who walks alone and soliloquizes according to the orthodox idea of the beginning of a drama, is stationed on the flat surface of the temporary top of that fatal tower told of in the sacred scriptures. The plain is full of people as far as sight can reach, and the work of "making, hoisting and imbedding brick" goes steadily on, speeded by the vast multitude of toiling hands. Pay day in that work was a memorable day—memorable for its confusion. There is no mention that the "section hands" had not been paid off for four months, but the toilers were clamorous nevertheless, and a riot sprang up. We cannot, for want of space, follow the movements of the drama through, but they are dramatic enough to satisfy the most ardent admirer of "rapidity" in dramatic performances and end just where the historical character of the subject requires they should end namely, in the confusion of speech and the complete scattering of the riotous multitudes, who never could find the way home again. This production is got up secundum artem, and is a little stiff in some places, but all in all, is not a bad, but a very good performance.

Rev James Freeman Clarke presents a pointed piece of lumber to the Governor of Massachusetts in the interrogatory which he took as a text for his Fast day sermon "Why should the Governor not have omitted the word 'Humiliation' in the heading of the Fast day proclamation?" Mr Clarke notices that instead of being announced as a "Day of Fasting, and Humiliation, and of Prayer," it is termed, this year "A Day of Fasting and Prayer." Mr Clarke ought to remember that it is not proper in a clergyman to ask impertinent questions. It cannot be that reference is had to Ben Butler's salary steal, Ginery Twitchell's modest attempt to secure Congressional legislation on a railroad of which he was President. Neither is it at all probable that Mr Clarke intends to convey the impression that Oakes Ames hadn't a right to place his Credit Mobilier stock just "where it would do the most good." These are all "honorable men," and their deeds have gone into history. What can Mr Clarke mean?

The Washington Chronicle points the moral in a story told by the Louisville Journal. The latter paper, speaking of the execution of a murderer on the 28th of March, says: "A woman took her little boy to the hanging yesterday, because he is so bad that she fears he will end his life in the same manner. She said she wanted him to see the sad spectacle in order thereby to improve his morals by a little wholesome fear." Whereupon the Chronicle adds: "A woman in New Hampshire some years ago did the same thing to secure the same wished for result and the lesson was effective, for the next day the young [illegible] constructed a miniature gallows, hung the cat, and had his little brother half hung before his mother discovered the results of the moral lesson she had treated him to the day before."

The public debt statement for March shows the reduction of the debt during the month to have been $1,110,6[illegible] 07. In February the reduction was $[illegible],877,880 77. In January there was an increase of $409,211 18. The aggregate reduction from March 1st, 1869 to the present time has been $361,726,618 1[illegible]. Of this reduction there was made in 1869, $70,710,306 70; in 1870, $116,679,1[illegible] 06; in 1871, $89,221,182 71; in 1872, $82,585,073 02; in 1873, to March 1st, $6,015,696 56.

July is very vicious. It says it is rumored that Mr Carlyle's works will be shortly translated into English.

Meacham and the Peace Commission

SALEM, April 14 1873

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

The latest news from the Modoc war naturally excites the popular mind extremely, for it is a chapter of perfidy unequaled before even by Indian treachery. Much fault has been found with Mr Meacham because he was connected with the Peace Commission. Condemnation is pronounced upon Secretary Delano by wholesale, and all those who gave an indorsement to the peace policy share the execration.

General E. L. Applegate claims to be entitled no doubt to the author of the Peace Commission [illegible] to Mr [illegible] and as he has furnished [illegible] full history [illegible] his argument [illegible] that all others [illegible] it is not necessary to recur to the particulars now. It is known that Gen Grant earnestly desired to pursue a peace policy toward the Indians. We who were in Washington seemed to all agree with Applegate that the Modocs had [illegible] for bad influences; that they complained of being on the same reservation with the Klamaths because the latter had been their enemies and did not use them well, and the administration thought it was best to try and avoid the loss of life that must ensue from a war carried on in the lava beds as well as the massacre of settlers that would occur if the band of Capt. Jack roamed about and spoiled the country. It was also one object to save the great expense of an Indian war.

The proposition was to remove the Indians entirely, which certainly would have satisfied the people of Oregon if it could have been done. Not a word was said about amnesty for the murderers.

I was present on one occasion when the matter was talked over in the office of the Secretary of the Interior and I am satisfied that Secretary Delano was actuated by the highest and purest motives. When the list of the dead who must fall ere the lava beds are conquered shall be published the public will perhaps recognize the value of the peace policy, could it have been made successful.

I did not understand that Mr Meacham was in the least degree responsible for the adoption of the peace policy or the determination to send out a Peace Commission. He accepted the position with reluctance, and only when he had been allowed to name his associates. The Oregonians there, when it was decided to send Peace Commissioners, united in recommending Mr Meacham, and then, for the first time, Meacham having received the appointment, called on Secretary Delano. Up to that time, he had not said a word or written a pen stroke on the matter.

Secretary Delano seems to have had the best reason in the world, up to the last moment, for hoping that the Commission would be a success. It is the fashion now for the charge to be made that Gen Canby has been sacrificed by Delano's misconduct, but this is answered by a dispatch published in the New York Times, April 1st, in its associated press reports:

THE INDIANS—GEN CANBY'S VIEW OF THE PEACE COMMISSION'S WORK

"WASHINGTON, March 31.—General Canby telegraphs Gen Sherman that the Commission to the Modocs works well. He says that on the 27th inst., the Modocs again invited a conference, and Col Gillem with the party examining the approaches to the Lava Beds, had a short interview with two of the most intelligent, both, however, of the peace party. He is of opinion that they are more subdued and more amenable to reasoning than at the last interview. Canby thinks that when the avenues of escape are closed and their supplies cut off or abridged they will come in."

This dispatch shows that at that time appearances justified Secretary Delano's course and warranted the continuance of the Peace Commission.

This dispatch relieves any one else from responsibility for the death of Gen Canby, and shows that he was satisfied with the Peace Commission and believed in its efficiency. He was mistaken, and we were all mistaken who favored that policy, but the Administration still commands my respect for its efforts to live peaceably and deal justly, even with Indians. It is some satisfaction to recognize that even its failings lean on virtue's side.

Rev E P Hammond, who has been traveling over the Western States conjuring the religious dry bones of the different churches, has arrived in Colorado. His labors in Denver City are thus referred to in a dispatch:

"The great religious revival which has been in progress in Denver City for the past two weeks, under the direction of the Rev E P Hammond, continues with increased interest. Several hundred conversions have been made. At the request of a prominent 'sporting man,' 200 tickets were distributed yesterday among gamblers, saloon keepers and prostitutes. Many attended the meeting last evening occupying reserved seats. Five or six of this class arose for prayer. The committee are visiting the saloons and houses of prostitution to-day praying with the inmates and inviting them to the meetings. They are received with respectful attention. Six prisoners in jail are said to be under deep conviction. Prayer meetings are held in the jail every morning. The influence is extending among professional and business men."

MUSIC AND MUTTON.—At St Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin, there was an old vicar choral, who loved his dinner "not wisely, but too well." He had bought a fine quarter of mutton and intended to have it for his Sunday's repast, after the fatigue of chanting the morning service, but forgot to tell his wife in what manner he wanted it to be cooked. The good lady, however, was equal to the emergency. In the middle of the "Te Deum" a small boy was observed to creep up the aisle till he came near the choir, where his father was singing, and a piping treble with the chorus, thus:

"My mother's got a quarter of mutton, and she don't know what to do oo oo wi' it." The father responds "Let her boil the leg and roast the loin, and make a dumpling of the su u u ot. Omen—Amen!"

The New York Tribune of March 29th says that Judge Thompson Mason Secretary of State of Maryland, died on the 28th, at Elkton Md., of paralysis. Judge Mason had been engaged trying a case in court during the forenoon and was in his usual health, but was attacked at the dinner table. He has been a member of Congress, Judge of the Court of Appeals of New York, and Collector of the Port of Baltimore, and was one of the most prominent citizens of the State.

The act "to apportion the representation of Tennessee in the Congress of the United States" contains the following provision, which seems to be somewhat remarkable:

"That in the event of a tie vote between candidates for Representatives in the Congress of the United States, no one receiving the highest or greatest number of votes the Governor shall determine the same by giving the casting vote, and issue the certificate of election accordingly."

The Louisville Courier Journal delights in digs at Cincinnati. Here is the latest and most cruel: "It has been found that Cincinnati whisky contains ammonia, pyrodine, picoline, lutidine, collidine, formic, acetic, propionic, butyric, valerianic and carbolic acids, creosote and strychnine. At any rate it is said that tobacco contains all these things except strychnine, and Cincinnati whisky contains tobacco."

Senator McCreery, of Kentucky, who is a very sensitive man it seems, became offended because Stevenson, his colleague, was served better than himself in the matter of "assignments to Committees." He therefore requested to be relieved from all committee duty. His request has been granted and the question "how much better off are you than you were before?" would doubtless be offensive to him.

Remember the Noon Day Prayer Meetings at the rooms of the Y. M. C. A., corner of Stark and First street, from 12½ to 1 o'clock.

If you want the woven wire bed, parlor and bedroom suits, the best spring and pure hair mattresses, go to Hurgren & Shindler.

Letter from Halsey

HALSEY, April 15, 1873

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

I see a late communication in the Bulletin from "Farmer," who "shoots his mouth off" on tariffs, and tries to show that the farmers of this part of the Valley are satisfied with the present rates on the railroad and cites the days of river transportation and the rates charged then. Suppose they charged at an early day on the river $8 from Peoria to Portland for passengers and $20 per ton for freight. Was not every article in proportion? Did not a meal of victuals cost at that time $1 to $1 25? Money was plenty. But suppose times had been as tight then as now what thinks Mr "Farmer" the tariff on the river would have been. But thus it is ever; we find those that have the least at stake and whose possessions can be told in a few words and either rent land or possess from six to ten acres, can tell the world what living tariffs are and speak for the whole community where they live and even tell the changes about to be made in newspapers. Perhaps it would not be well for the Bulletin to order a new press, or go in debt on the strength of the [illegible] from Halsey. Suffice it to say the OREGONIAN knows full well what its circulation is here, and your humble servant knows it is twice or three times as large as the Bulletin. But enough of this.

If there is a good [illegible] in your city almost out of work and no money for board he can make a good living here and after a short time make money, as the one nearest here is seventeen miles.

Perhaps you may hear from me again when I hope to have more to write about.

Yours

WEDNESDAY MORNING APRIL 16 1873

CITY.

A WIFE BEATER.—On Sunday night a late hour officer Barlow while patroling his beat heard a female screaming murder about one block distant Hurrying to the locality with all possible haste he found the outcries to emanate from a small house The front door being unlocked he opened it and entered the room In the dimly lighted apartment he discovered a woman lying prone face downward and apparently unable to rise She was uttering the most heart piercing cries as if suffering acute physical agony The officer tenderly assisted the poor woman to her feet but even then it was with difficulty that she could stand alone Inquiry elicited the information that the wretched brute of a husband had dealt the woman a powerful kick in the back without the least provocation To make the assault appear more aggravated the woman was a frail puny creature and had an infant only three weeks old She informed the officer that her husband was in an adjoining room Admittance was peremptorily demanded by Barlow and the bedroom door was, after some delay reluctantly thrown open The brutal fellow, whose name is Quinn, was informed that he could consider himself a prisoner As he was clad in night clothes the officer told him to don his outer garments and follow him This order Quinn emphatically refused to obey Finding that he would not comply the officer lost Job's virtue and seizing hold of Quinn he waltzed him lively to jail in a state of dishabille not many removes from nudity The officer gives it as his opinion that the latter extremity of Quinn's only garment stood at an angle of about fifty degrees to the horizon as it rustled in the night wind while on the way to jail The night was very cold and the prisoner arrived at headquarters half chilled to death He sincerely regretted not having obeyed the officer's orders and dressed himself Passing a comfortless and sleepless night Quinn was arraigned yesterday morning in the Police Court on the charge of inhumanly maltreating his wife The Court very justly sentenced the unfeeling and brutal husband to pay a fine of $50 and costs

SHIPPED BY EXPRESS.—Wells Fargo & Co's Express being regarded by law as "common carriers," that company is the medium through which almost every conceivable article of merchandise is passed Live stock is often sent by this express all over the country, and even the remains of defunct humanity are forwarded from place to place under the surveillance of the company But the latest novelty we have heard of in the way of transferring articles by this express took place yesterday The articles in question proved to be two live children It seems that a gentleman residing in Seattle had two small children at Vancouver which he was anxious to have brought over to him Not having any one into whose care he could commit them while they were making the trip, he concluded at length to have them sent by express Yesterday morning they were brought over on the steamer, and having been duly booked and receipted for at the office in this city, they were sent in the afternoon to Kalama on the steamer Fannie Troup, from whence they will be forwarded by rail and stage to their fond parent One of these children was not more than a year old the other about three years This is certainly a novel way of sending children about We opine that there are few parents who would be willing to place their tender bantlings in such jeopardy of life and limb

PALL BEARERS.—The remains of Gen E R S Canby are expected to reach Roseburg this evening from Yreka A special train will be in readiness at the end of the road to receive them having on board the committee appointed by the Common Council in behalf of Portland In conjunction with the military, this committee will accompany the body to this city On arriving here, the remains will be escorted to his late residence, from whence they will be removed to the Washington Guard Armory and allowed to lie in state for some hours The following persons have been selected as pall bearers to accompany the remains from his late residence to the Armory On the part of the military Colonel R S Granger, 21st Infantry Lieut Col R Saxton, Deputy Q M General, Surgeon George E Cooper, Medical Director, Major David Taggart, Chief Paymaster, Surgeon R H Alexander, U S Army Major H Clay Wood, Assistant Adjutant General; Major William A Rucker, Paymaster, U S A., Major H M Robert, Engineer Corps U S A, On the part of the citizens Hon Philip Wasserman, Hon M P Deady James Steel, Esq C H Lewis Esq Henry Failing, Esq, Ben Holladay Esq B Goldsmith, Esq J B Montgomery, Esq

CARRIAGE UPSET.—A few days since two ladies who were out riding in a one horse buggy beyond the Lone Fir Cemetery, met with a severe accident Having driven as far eastward as was desirable, they started to turn the horse around But the animal turned too short, "cramped" one of the fore wheels and capsized the vehicle Both the occupants were thrown violently to the ground, one lady receiving a severe contusion on the head and face The other lady escaped with a few scratches The horse, after the buggy upset, ran some distance, but was stopped by a man who witnessed the accident from a distance The vehicle was righted and the frightened women were at length induced to get in, when the gentleman led the horse down to the ferry landing No damage resulted to the buggy or harness We learn that the injured lady has nearly recovered from the shock and fright

LIVELY MELEE.—A very lively scene was enacted last evening near the corner of Second and Taylor streets among the disreputable denizens of that locality Two women of unenviable character, became engaged in a broil High words were indulged in, and a personal collision ensued in which one of the combatants received a blow on the side of the head, inflicting a severe gash The one who had been placed hors de combat in the melee, rushed out on the street making loud outcries, and covered with blood The noise attracted a large crowd of curious spectators who lined the sidewalks and corners A policeman arrived on the scene and brought the disgraceful proceedings to a summary close The female who is claimed to be the aggressor, was arrested, but gave bail for her appearance in the Police Court this morning, when the case will come up for examination

A "GOAK."—An Olympia paper is responsible for the following "A good joke is told at the expense of one of the hotels in Portland When our townsman Abbott reached Portland he made his usual display of jewelry and money and deposited some considerable portion of the latter in the safe of the hotel Altogether he produced such an impression upon the proprietor's mind that when the bill was called for no charge was made the latter thinking that when Abbott returned from below he would bring enough patrons with him to make the investment a good one Steamers have come and gone and neither the loquacious Solon nor the hosts of passengers his eloquence was to lead willing captors appear for their diurnal hash "

JUVENILE OFFENDER.—A small boy was arraigned in the Police Court yesterday morning on a charge of drunkenness The offender was found lying on the sidewalk in a helpless condition of intoxication On being questioned by the Court as to his guilt or innocence the youthful prisoner evaded a direct response by stating that he was subject to fits and he reckoned that he must have been under the influence of one of them when picked up by the officer The Court failed to admit the relevancy of the plea and so he remarked to the wayward juvenile that he would charge him $10 for that fit

HORSES.—Eighty head of horses were brought down last evening on the Dalles boat These animals were sent up early last winter by Mr J B Montgomery the Northern Pacific Railroad contractor and placed on a ranch As work is shortly to be commenced beyond Tenino these horses will be sent to the front this morning to be used along the line of the road

CALIFORNIA ARRIVED.—The steamer California arrived here last evening from Victoria and way ports She brought nothing but stone for the new Custom House and coal for the Gas Company—about 900 tons altogether—but no passengers The California after discharging her cargo will load for Sitka

BEING DRAPED.—Washington Guard Armory is now being appropriately draped with the national colors and crape for the sad, melancholy event to take place on Thursday afternoon A large quantity of these necessary materials came over from Vancouver yesterday

LOT PURCHASED.—The Hibernian Benevolent Society have purchased the lot on the southwest corner of Washington and Sixth streets The price paid was $3 ... A building will be erected on the site and a hall 50x90 feet will be set apart for the use of the Society

For a particular statement of the several purposes for which disbursements have been made we refer to the report of the Clerk

We have during the year passed an extensive addition to be made to the Central School building which, however is not yet completed, owing to lack of funds Steps should be immediately taken to complete the building as the space which would be obtained by such completion is needed by the requirements of the district and the increased number of scholars The High School has been removed to this building which has in a measure relieved the other schools from their over crowded state From the increase of the number of scholars more room is required, as the schools are too much crowded

The Directors estimate the expenses of the district for the ensuing year as follows

Teachers salaries	$25 000 00

The Insurrection against the Railways

[From the New York Times]

During one half the year the grain producers of the country are completely at the mercy of the railways The great trunk lines from the West to the East exercise a despotic power over the fortunes of that agricultural empire known as the Northwest embracing ten millions of people and producing $1 000 000 000 a year This power far greater and more arbitrary than is known in any political organization of Western Europe rests substantially without checks in the hands of three men, and in the hands of those they choose to associate with them This tyranny oppressive and offensive as it is is exercised with relentless severity The farmer who raises his wheat or corn in the Northwest is taxed by it from fifty to seventy five per cent of his gross earnings Of every four bushels he gathers he is obliged to pay from two to three as tribute to this little band of rulers, who have almost imperceptibly been for years strengthening their hold upon him Corn which sold for seventy three cents last month in Boston netted the Illinois farmer only twenty three These exactions, ruinous in extent are enforced with all the adjuncts that render taxation odious and intolerable They are variable in form uncertain in presentation unequal in distribution and collected often with insolence and always with rigor So galling are they in all their features and so disastrous in their consequences, that no government could impose them to one fourth the amount or with one half their aggravating incidents without being surely and swiftly and probably violently overthrown

Though it is not the amount of the taxes which the railways levy that is their only oppressive feature yet that is something which few people in the East realize We are so largely engaged in the work of effecting exchanges only and our transactions are made for the most part over an area relatively so small that it is difficult for us to understand the weight of the burden borne by the producers of the West in the expense of getting their products to market We sell often at a loss, but we never find it more profitable to destroy our property than to try to sell it at all But for months farmers in Iowa and Minnesota have been burning their corn for fuel and many thousand bushels were allowed to rot on the ground rather than incur the expense of harvesting When we remember the unexampled facilities the West enjoys for production—in the soil, improved methods and machinery and intelligent labor—this picture is nothing less that startling

But it is not the enormous cost of freight alone which makes the lot of the farmers a hard one It is the manner in which the cost is imposed Freights vary from month to month, and one half the year are from one third to double what they are during the other half Corn which can be sent from Chicago to New York for sixteen cents in June by water, and which the railways will carry for twenty five cents in August the same railways charge thirty six cents for carrying in January and this is believed to be in one case twice, and in the other three times what would fairly compensate the roads for carriage Freights vary too with locality Distances shorter by 200 miles are charged for at higher rates than longer ones Between New York City and the State of Indiana 100 pounds of freight can be carried for twenty five cents and doubtless money is made by the operation But between Rochester N Y and the same point in Indiana a distance less by 400 miles the charge is $1 25 for 100 pounds Plainly more than four fifths of this charge is profit In other words, the profit is more than 100 per cent These are but examples of facts which the business community can furnish plenty of others to match

Nor are these the only offensive characteristics of the present condition of affairs The extortion which every one can see are intolerably heavy and aggravating are the work of a combination of men whose sole title to their profits comes from the free gift of the people The public feel that they are being bound with bonds of their own forging It is from the people that all railway franchises proceed Moreover in a large number of cases the people have actually taxed themselves to build the road whose managers are now pressing them so sorely This adds indignation to a sense of suffering and loss Privileges which were given for public as well as private gain are perverted solely to private ends The process partakes of robbery or, at least of swindling

The secret of the course of the railways is not far to seek Most of them are seeking apparently moderate dividends, but these dividends are the profits of an investment far smaller than their apparent capital, which is swollen by continual watering This is equivalent to saying that the railway companies are greedy and have the power within the forms of law to satisfy their greed They are practically irresponsible Legislation so far has been almost exclusively on their side Everything has been done for encouragement, nothing for restriction Now the tide is turning There is a powerful reaction in the public mind and especially in the West, which is taking the shape of widespread organization What remedies will be finally devised it is too soon to say, but unless representative government is a delusion, the creatures of the law will, in the long run, be curbed by law

Never Too Late to Mend

When the stomach is in a state of chronic rebellion against every kind of food and the attending physician with solemn and portentous gravity declares that such cases of confirmed dyspepsia defy all remedies do not put faith in his ipse dixit Indigestion of this obstinate character may be incurable by his prescriptions, but it is not therefore an irremovable fixture in the system The fact is that the great vegetable invigorant and corrective Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is radically curing cases of this seemingly desperate nature every day Indeed it is in those malignant phases of dyspepsia which no ordinary medicine can control that its remedial properties are most wonderfully manifested We say to the long suffering martyr whose stomach is a source of perpetual torment to him that by the persistent and daily use of this glorious tonic he can not only restore the digestive organs to their full vigor but can keep them in good working order through life If there is constipation the gentle aperient operation of the Bitters will remove all obstructions, and keep the bowels in a regular and healthy condition The grand characteristic of this vitalizing and purifying vegetable preparation is that it acts beneficially upon every organ controlling the liver reinforcing the nerves toning the coats of the stomach promoting a healthy habit of body relieving the blood of all impurities clearing the brain and reviving the spirits.

DECISION IN THE U S DISTRICT COURT BY JUDGE DEADY.

Although at the time of a collision the engineer on the [illegible] was not licensed, this circumstance will not prevent a recovery of damages for the injury where the evidence shows that the want of a licensed engineer did not contribute to the collision.

A wire cable stretched across the Wallamet river as a guy on which to run a ferry boat is not an unlawful obstruction to navigation, unless it [illegible] prevents or renders hazardous the navigation of the river by others.

When vessels are approaching each other in what the pilot rules call "the first situation," the boat that is [illegible] the other [illegible] should keep her course, and the other should port her helm and pass astern.

Joseph Knott v. the Steamer Vancouver — [illegible] claimant.

DEADY, J. Tuesday, April 15, 1873.

This is a cause of collision. The libel was filed January 11, 1873. The following facts are admitted by the pleadings or proven by the evidence.

On January 6, 1873, the libellant Joseph Knott was the owner of a sidewheel steam ferry boat, called the Portland, which was then and a long time before plying to and fro across the Wallamet river between the foot of Stark street, in the city of Portland, and L street in East Portland, a distance of about 1200 feet. The hull of the Portland is 93 feet in length and the aprons attached to each end are about 12 or 15 feet long. She was steered or guided by a steel wire cable or guy four inches in circumference, laid across the bed of the river and passing through a sheaf at each end of the boat, a few feet back of the aprons.

The Vancouver is a stern wheel steamboat about 120 feet long, which at and before the time of the collision was making daily trips between Portland and Vancouver. About 3 o'clock P M of January 6 the Vancouver left her berth about 150 feet above the west landing of the ferry boat, for Vancouver, having on board a party of excursionists. There was a four knot current in the river and the wind was high and down stream. In leaving her wharf, the Vancouver usually backed down across the route of the ferry boat and then turned her bow down stream, but on this occasion she went ahead about 100 feet.

When the Vancouver gave the whistle to cast off from her wharf, the Portland was about 200 feet from her east landing, crossing to the west, with passengers, and her pilot assuming that the Vancouver would back down in front of her, stopped her, but the Vancouver going up stream the Portland resumed her voyage, and when about 600 feet from the east shore, gave one whistle as a signal to pass to the right. The Vancouver, which at this time was swinging round into the stream about 400 feet above and 200 feet west of the ferry boat, answered the signal promptly with one whistle. By the time she got fairly turned round and pointed down stream, she was 500 feet from the west shore and making 8 or 10 miles an hour. When within 250 feet of the ferry boat and when the bow of the latter had crossed her jack staff she gave two whistles to signal that she would pass to the left, in front of the ferry boat and starboarded her helm so as to point her bow quartering towards the west shore.

To this signal, the ferry boat promptly responded with one whistle, thus indicating her intention to pass to the starboard according to her original purpose, but seeing that the Vancouver was apparently coming down on them, the pilot immediately gave the signals to stop and back, which were obeyed. The pilot of the Vancouver, when within 100 feet of the ferry boat, seeing that he could not pass clear, gave the signals to stop and back, which were obeyed, but in a few seconds thereafter the collision occurred by the Vancouver striking the Portland obliquely 10 or 12 feet back of the forward apron, crushing in her guards and cutting or breaking the wire cable at the point where it came in contact with the cut water of the former. The collision and resistance of the wire checked the forward motion of the Vancouver when she backed out and passed on, to the right, without stopping. The Portland floated down stream without a guide, until she was brought under control by means of a steering oar, when she steamed back to the east shore—being unable to make the west one on account of the breaking of the apron chain, which let the apron down into the water and rendered it impossible to propel the boat in that direction.

Upon this trip the engineer on the ferry boat was not a licensed one, but the proof is satisfactory, that he obeyed all the signals promptly, and that this circumstance in no way contributed to the collision. Both boats were under the charge of licensed pilots.

The evidence is conflicting, as to whether either of the boats was backing at the moment of the collision. It is propable that both of them had shut off steam, and that the Vancouver had commenced to back her wheel so as to check her speed, but not to stop her way. The pilot of the Vancouver testifies that when he gave the signal to stop and back, she was only about 100 feet from the Portland. At that time she was making 11 feet to the second. From the time of giving those signals, nine seconds would take her across the course of the ferry boat, while the latter was approaching the point of collision at a speed of six feet to the second.

Under the circumstances, it does not appear probable that the collision could have been prevented when the pilot of the Vancouver gave the signals to stop and back, because at the rate she was then going, with the wind and current as they were, she could not stop her way in 100 feet—something less than her own length. This being so, it is necessary to go back and ascertain by whose fault these boats were brought into this dangerous proximity and condition.

When the Vancouver blew the two whistles the boats were in what the Pilot Rules call the "first situation." The ferryboat was crossing the bows of the Vancouver at right angles, to port, and was therefore entitled to keep on her way, while for the same reason, it was the duty of the latter to port her helm, and pass astern of the former. There is no doubt but that if this rule had been obeyed by the Vancouver the collision would not have happened. Prima facie, therefore, she is in fault and should suffer the loss sustained by the collision.

It may be said that if the ferryboat had stopped and backed, when the Vancouver gave the two whistles, that the latter could have passed to the left without collision. But the Vancouver had no right to give this signal. It was her duty to pass to the right, particularly after having signaled her intention so to do. Of course it was the duty of the ferry boat, whether first in fault or not, to avoid a collision if possible. But allowance must be made for the circumstances in which she was placed by the prior misconduct of the Vancouver.

She could only move back and forth upon one line, and her deck was but two or three feet above the water. The Vancouver, a double deck boat, at a distance of 250 feet, while going at the rate of 8 or 9 miles an hour, down stream, suddenly changes her course and signals her intention to cross the bow of the ferryboat. It is very doubtful if the way of the boat could then have been checked soon enough to have prevented the collision. But if it now appeared probable, that the collision might have been avoided, by immediately stopping and backing the ferryboat, it must be remembered that the persons in charge with the passengers were in great danger of their lives by this sudden and wrongful change of direction by the Vancouver. From the deck of the ferry boat it appeared as if the Vancouver would run the former down in an instant. There was no time for reflection or precaution. For acts done under such circumstances the law does not hold parties, who are otherwise innocent, responsible. In City of Paris, 9 Wal., 638, Mr Justice Swayne in considering a similar case, says: "The acts complained of were done in the excitement of the moment and in extremis. Whether they were wise, it is not material to inquire. If unwise, they were errors and not faults. In such case the law in its wisdom gives absolution."

The claimant, however, impliedly admitting that under ordinary circumstances the Vancouver ought to have passed astern of the ferry boat, alleges in its answer that it was prevented from so doing by reason of the wire cable of the latter being stretched level with the water from the boat to the east shore until it reached the middle of the river. The evidence does not sustain the allegation; on the contrary, the weight of it is decidedly against it.

The river deepens quickly from the west shore, so that at 100 feet from such shore it is about 60 feet deep; from thence it shoals gradually to the east shore, and within 100 feet thereof is about 10 feet deep. The rope weighs something over four tons, and lies on the bottom of the river, and is taken up and passed astern as the ferry boat moves back and forth. In crossing, in time of high water and strong wind, there is an unusual pressure upon the boat down stream. This makes it describe a line slightly curved down stream, and to this extent the cable is tightened and drawn near the surface of the water. Under those circumstances the claimant gave some evidence tending to prove that if the Vancouver crossed the wire when near the surface her rudder might catch on it and become unshipped.

But the evidence shows that the Vancouver, which drew about two feet of water, could cross the wake of the ferryboat within fifty feet of it with perfect safety, when the latter was 300 feet from shore. In my judgment it is not possible for the ferry boat under any lateral pressure which it can sustain, to lift this cable and hold it taut upon the surface of the water at a distance of one half or even one fourth of the way from either shore. In company with counsel, I crossed the river on the boat when the water and wind were both strong and the cable sank out of sight in 150 or 200 feet from either shore. The evidence shows that steamboats have often crossed the wake of the ferryboat within forty feet and that no accident has ever happened to any boat on account of the wire.

But even if it were true that it was unsafe for the Vancouver to cross the cable in the wake of the ferryboat, when the former gave the signal to pass to the left, she was not justified in attempting to cross the bow of the ferry boat. She was free and could move in any direction while the ferry boat could only move back and forth in a straight line. She should have stopped, gone aside or turned back if necessary—indeed, she should have crossed the wire and risked her rudder rather than a collision and the destruction of both boats and the lives of the people on board.

The claimant also insists that the cable of the ferry boat is an obstruction to navigation and unlawful and therefore the libellants cannot recover. Upon this point, evidence was produced by both parties. The great preponderance of it goes to show that a cable is not an obstruction, in any sense that would make it unlawful. In some sense, or degree, every vessel that is launched upon the river is an obstruction to its navigation. The portion of the surface of the river occupied by it cannot be occupied by another at the same time, and the result is that neither can have the unrestricted or unobstructed use of the river without collision with the other. But such an obstruction is not an unlawful one. What is an unlawful obstruction must always depend upon the circumstances of the particular case. The Wallamet river is a public highway, free and open to be navigated by any kind of vessel for any purpose, not specially prohibited by law. So long as any such vessel, however guided or propelled, does not actually prevent or render hazardous the navigation of the river by others, I suppose it cannot be considered an obstruction to navigation in the ordinary sense of the term.

1 Par Ad., 647 cites Potter v. Pettis, to show that a vessel may lawfully obstruct the the navigation of a stream by extending a warp across the entire channel, provided it be lowered on the approach of another vessel so as to permit it to pass in the usual channel.

But upon this point it is not necessary to speak absolutely. In my judgment it is immaterial whether this cable is or was an unlawful obstruction to the navigation of the river or not. If it is, proceedings may be had by any one who is aggrieved by it, to abate it as a nuisance. Granting that it was an unlawful obstruction to the free navigation of the river, the Vancouver was not therefore justified in willfully running down the ferry boat or placing herself in such a position with reference to her as to render a collision unavoidable. The Vancouver knew of the existence and condition of the cable when she left her wharf on the day of the collision. She was then offered two-thirds of the channel on the west side on which to back down across the line of the cable as usual. For some reason, she declined the offer and steamed up the river as if she was going to Oregon City on an excursion. Upon this the ferry boat went ahead as she had a right to do, and as she saw the Vancouver turning down stream, signaled to her to pass to the right. Under these circumstances it was the duty of the Vancouver to have slowed her engine so as to give time for observation and deliberation, if there was any probability of danger in crossing the cable astern of the ferry boat, as is alleged by the claimant. If the strain upon the cable on account of the force of the current and the wind was likely to bring the cable to the surface, it was not a new thing under the circumstances, and the pilot of the Vancouver must have been familiar with the occurrence. In any event, the Vancouver should have passed astern of the ferry boat, as there is little doubt she might have done with perfect safety, or else kept away until the ferry boat had moved so far west as to make it certain in the judgment of the pilot, that the cable had sunk astern of her.

On the whole, it appears that the pilot of the Vancouver not only erred in attempting to pass to the left of the ferry boat, but that he done so under circumstances that evince an almost wanton disregard of the safety of the latter and her passengers and crew. Being alone in fault, the Vancouver must compensate the libellant for the injury done to his boat and wire.

The libel alleges that the libellant has sustained damages to the amount of $2,000, but the proof does not support the allegation.

The wire cost originally, in San Francisco, $1,060, and had been in use from October, 1872. After the collision it was taken up, spliced, and put down again, and has been in use ever since. Forty feet of its length was consumed in making the splice. At the splice it is probably as strong as anywhere, but it is rough, and will wear the sheaf faster on that account. The evidence upon the injury to the wire is meager and vague. Levi Knott, the son of the libellant, states that it is of no value for that ferry—for what reason he does not say, except the additional friction on the sheaf from the splice, and that it is now too short for very high water. Foster, the pilot on the ferry boat, thinks it is damaged $500. This is all the evidence on the subject, except the view of the court. I find the libellant has sustained damage by the collision as follows.

Injury to the guard and apron of the ferry boat, $100, wages of an extra hand half a month, while the boat was run with a steering-oar, $25, loss of one third of usual receipts during same period, $162, cost of taking up and splicing wire cable, $150, loss of 40 feet of cable used in making splice, $40, general depreciation in value of whole cable from decrease of length, and being spliced, $150—total, $827. These figures being made upon coin estimates and the decree being made in currency, I add 12 per cent to this amount, making in all $926 24, for which a decree will be entered for the libellant.

L. F. Bronaugh & John Catlin, for libellant.

J. F. Caples & Julius Moreland, for claimant.

During the past two or three days our local finances have been in a very quiet state owing to the fact that other and [illegible] questions have almost completely absorbed the attention of the public. The dawn of good weather has [illegible] exercised a more active influence in the various departments of business than has been perceptible at any previous time during the Spring. That a scarcity of available funds obtainable on easy terms is still felt, cannot be denied but the commencement of varied improvements, both of a public and private character now at hand, assures us that a considerable amount of capital will be set afloat in our city and State, and have a tendency to render the stringency less severe. The New York money market is reported on the 2d inst as follows:

The monetary stringency was very severe again to-day and though stocks were turned at a quarter at the very beginning, yet before three o'clock borrowers were paying on call as much as three-quarters per cent bonus or 280 per cent a year. The course of the currency from the country is now turning in favor of this center, considerable remittances having been received from the interior to-day and now that the first of April settlements are over the volume will be largely increased and while money may very likely rule active at 1 or 2 per cent per month for a few days to come it is not probable that the fictitious and ruinous rates of yesterday and to-day can continue much longer. Mercantile paper is entirely nominal. The legal tenders outstanding to-night are $358 603 000, against $358 000 000 last night, which in connection with the Treasury story above would and may have induced the break in money rates to an eighth in late transactions. The following are the Treasury balances at the close of business: Coin $69 500 000, of which $24 100 000 are certificates, and currency, $2 300 000.

The following is a comparative statement of the export of specie for 22 years from New York to foreign ports from January 1 to March 29 1873 and for the corresponding period of the antecedent years:

The Wool Market.

Our latest Eastern advices by mail indicate no present prospects of activity in the market [illegible]. From the circular of Walter Brown & Sons dated New York the 2d inst, we clip the following:

Again we have to note a dull and unsatisfactory month in the Wool trade with a continued tendency towards lower range of prices, so that between the opening and the [illegible] of the month a decline of from five to eight cents ℔ has been established. In regard to the prospects for the future we cannot see any probability of improvement until the relation between supply and demand has materially changed. At the present time the amount of stock for sale exceeds the requirements of consumers for the number of running cards, which under the unprosperous condition of the woolen goods trade has been for several months considerably reduced. By reference to the published estimates of the quantity of Wool grown during the past few years respectively it may be readily seen that as soon as from any cause the price of Wool advances to extreme figures the culture of it is so stimulated that only one or two years is required to create an excess. The change is the more rapid because while in the pasture the flocks are multiplying in the mill the looms are stopping, and almost before the fact is suspected there is a surplus the world over. Is not this the present condition? The extreme rates of 1871 caused great increase of flocks everywhere, in consequence of which the amount of Wool thrown upon the market in this country during 1872 was 34,000,000 of pounds more than that received from every source during 1871. In the early part of 1872 the effect of this was materially felt and the tendency towards a decline was soon fairly established. Manufacturers were generally fully stocked, many of them having large orders to foreign markets and Wool producing countries, the proceeds of which are still arriving from Australia and London, where large quantities have been held and delivered as required. Manufacturers who have been driven by high prices from the use of Domestic Fleeces to that of Foreign Wools, find the latter so well adapted to their purposes, that they will not change back until Domestic Wools become cheaper than Foreign, for the reason, that the changing from the one to the other involves expense. Thus, much of the Domestic Wool, which at fair prices would have been woven into cloth, is still in many instances lying in the hands of farmers, who, unwilling in the season to accept the high figures then prevailing will now be compelled to take much lower rates, if they sell at all. The protracted monetary stringency has not only promoted this decline, but has prevented the reactions which frequently occur during a general change of value and, although such manufacturers as have stopped work altogether or in part, will now, we trust, be encouraged to start their machinery again, with fair prospects of remuneration, and thus create a more active business in the raw material yet we think it is sound reasoning to conclude that in a downward movement from no general cause considerably lower figures will be reached before any permanent reaction can take place. Market rates may not change much for the next few weeks, or until we approach the new clip, but we believe that Western holders of Wool will gain nothing, and may sustain additional loss by holding longer than is necessary to obtain their fair current market value. We would advise prompt shipments and quick sales. As the season advances we shall be better able to speak definitely as to the prices which it may be safe to pay for the next clip, and shall endeavor to give the best information to all our Western friends, simply remarking now that they can always more safely rely upon the opinion of intelligent Wool commission merchants who subscribe their names to what they may say than upon some of the newspaper market reports which, although not intended to mislead, are often too carelessly or ignorantly compiled.

Wheat at the East.

In commenting on the present and prospective condition of the wheat crops and markets the New York Tribune says that in January, millers very generally throughout the winter wheat growing States advised their agents in New York that farmers held no winter wheat, expressing the wish that their flour should be held for higher figures, as they would be able to ship very little if any more to New York this season, some five weeks later they write that wheat is coming out quite freely, and we shall have considerable flour to send you, and this was not confined to one State at the West, but to most of them; now if their agents have held on to their flour under the impression that their reports in January were correct, they cannot blame any one if they suffer some loss on the sales made the latter part of February and the early part of March. We allude to this subject now to caution millers and others to be careful as to what they write their agents as their interests are identical, and hence great care should be taken in obtaining correct information for New York. Our letters from the winter wheat growing States represent the supplies in the hands of farmers as now very light, and little more can be expected from them until the new crop comes in. This, we doubt not, is true of most localities. From some sections we have complaints of injury to the plant by frost, but so far these reports are confined to a few localities. The weather, since our last, has been unfavorable to the plant, the nights have been very cold, and we have no doubt some injury has been done, but, up to the present time, think it light. Our advices from Europe are not favorable for their crops; in England the appearances are decidedly unfavorable, though with warm rains and a mild spring much of the apprehension would doubtless be dispelled, though their area under wheat is known to be 25 to 30 per cent short of their usual area. The supply afloat for Great Britain at the present time is known to be considerably less than their estimated requirements and this fact induces much firmness with our chief holders. Our present small stock it is believed, is only sufficient to meet the wants of millers until the 1st of May; hence we cannot export much until June."

Home Produce Market.

Business under this head seems a little more active to-day and of these commodities of which there is a surplus in the interior except wheat, prices seem to be quite steady. An observation of movements to-day calls forth the following:

WHEAT—Transactions are now confined almost entirely to the purchase of comparatively small lots by millers, who usually pay a trifling advance on exporter's prices. We hear of an offer of 2,600 bushels choice at $1 44 per cental, without sacks, with no takers. Quotations remain at $1 50@1 56, sacks included.

FLOUR—The local demand is fair but that for export continues dull and prices rule steady at our former quotations. The supply from interior mills is adequate.

OATS—Oats continue to advance slowly but firmly and there is no doubt present prices will hold good for some time. Since our last review 70@72½ cents per bushel with sacks have changed hands and the latter figure is as near the ruling price offered by jobbers as can be given. The receipts are limited.

BARLEY—The demand for local consumption is encouraging to holders of choice lots for brewing purposes but at present, prices remain at $1 40@1 50 per 100 lbs in sacks.

HAY—Notwithstanding the advance of the spring season, the demand and diminished supply keep prices for good timothy at a fair figure and we quote jobbers buying at $15@16 and selling at $18@20 per ton.

FEED—The market is somewhat short of a full supply of bran and prices though indisposed to advance are kept firmly at our last quotations.

APPLES—Still we note lessened receipts and firm prices for all offerings, of the choicest varieties especially. Quotations are furnished at $1@1 25 ℔ box for shipping, and 1½c ℔ ℔ for loose and mixed lots from wagons.

POTATOES—Market dull and unchanged, 35@45c ℔ bushel, according to variety, being the given figures.

ONIONS—But little movement going on, 2¾@3c ℔ ℔ appears to be the nominal quotation.

BUTTER—The best quality of country butter in rolls commands 26c ℔ ℔. Common cooking is offered at all prices from 10c upward. The supply is large.

EGGS—The receipts so far during the week have exceeded present demands, and prices have again dropped to 18c ℔ dozen, at which the market is dull.

BACON—The dullness in our home market continues unabated and the large stocks in the hands of dealers together with dull markets abroad, preclude all hopes of any speedy rise. We quote for common lots of country-cured, sides, [illegible]c per ℔; shoulders, 9c; hams, 14c — sugar cured worth about 2 cents advance.

POULTRY—The market is in limited supply and prices are tending decidedly upward for good lots of chickens, which are quotable at $4 50@5 per dozen.

HIDES—Considerable shipments have been made, and dealers are free buyers at 7@8c ℔ ℔ for green and salted, and 16@17c for dry.

WOOL—Inquiry in regard to the future of prices in our home market elicits but little positive information, further than it is thought that the spring clip will command about 27½@30 cents per pound.

Notice to Taxpayers.

AN ARTICLE IN THE HERALD OF THIS MORNing signed "Taxpayer," asserts the object of the extension to the 30th of this month of the time for payment of the city taxes was to enable some person or persons to speculate in city warrants, and is calculated to create alarm among holders of warrants.

We beg to notify the public that all warrants for which provision was made in the late tax levy, will be paid upon presentation to the Treasurer.

TO THE UNFORTUNATE.

NEW REMEDIES, NEW REMEDIES

Dr. Gibbon's Dispensary,

623 KEARNEY STREET, NEAR COMMERCIAL, San Francisco. Established in 1854, for the treatment of Sexual and Seminal Diseases, such as Gonorrhea, Gleet, Stricture, Syphilis in all its forms, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, etc. Skin Diseases (of years standing) and Ulcerated Legs successfully treated.

DR. GIBBON has the pleasure of announcing that he has returned from visiting the principal Hospitals of Europe, and has resumed practice at his Dispensary, 623 Kearny street, corner of Commercial, San Francisco, where his old patients and those requiring his services may find him.

The Doctor has spared neither time nor money in seeking out new remedies, and has returned with increased facilities for the alleviation of human suffering.

Horrible Diseases.

How many thousands of persons, both male and female, are there who are suffering out a miserable existence from the effects of secret indulgences, or from virus absorbed into the system! Look at their pallid, emaciated and disfigured faces and their broken down constitutions, disqualifying them for the happiness of marriage or the enjoyment of life. In this horrid situation thousands suffer until death closes the scene. Let parents, guardians, friends, attend to those who are suffering with any of these horrible, life-destroying maladies—see that they are cared for and cured before it be too late. Send them immediately to DR GIBBON, a physician who has made private diseases his especial study for years and who is certain to cure the most inveterate case, without mercury or any injurious drugs. It is important to those who are afflicted, or to those who are interested in the welfare of their friends, to be careful of the many pretended doctors who infest all cities, publishing their skill in curing all diseases in a few days, imposing upon the public by using the names of eminent physicians from Europe and other places. Be therefore careful and make strict inquiry, or you may fall into the hands of those charlatans.

Seminal Weakness.

Seminal Emissions, the consequence of self-abuse. This solitary vice, or depraved sexual indulgence, is practiced by the youth of both sexes to an almost unlimited extent, producing with unerring certainty, the following train of morbid symptoms, unless combatted by scientific medical measures, viz. Sallow countenance, dark spots under the eyes, pain in the head, ringing in the ears, noise like the rustling of leaves and rattling of chariots, uneasiness about the loins, weakness of the limbs, confused vision, blunted intellect, loss of confidence, diffidence in approaching strangers, a dislike to form new acquaintances, disposition to shun society, loss of memory, hectic flushes, pimples and various eruptions about the face, furred tongue, fetid breath, coughs, consumption, night sweats, monomania and frequent insanity. If relief be not obtained, should apply immediately, either in person or by letter, and have a cure effected by his new and scientific mode of treating this disease, which never fails of effecting a quick and radical cure. Dr G will give One Hundred Dollars to any person who will prove satisfactorily to him that he was cured of this complaint by either of the San Francisco quacks.

MARRIED MEN.

Or those who contemplate marriage, who are suffering under any of these fearful maladies, should not forget the sacred responsibility resting upon them nor delay to obtain immediate relief.

DOCTOR GIBBON is responsible, and will give to each patient a written instrument, binding himself to effect a radical and permanent cure, or make no charge.

CURED AT HOME.

Persons at a distance may be CURED AT HOME, by addressing a letter to Dr. Gibbon, stating case, symptoms, length of time the disease has continued, and have medicines promptly forwarded, free from damage and curiosity, to any part of the country, with full and plain directions. By inclosing Ten Dollars coin, in registered letter through the Postoffice or through Wells, Fargo & Co., a package of medicine will be forwarded to any part of the Union.

All communications strictly confidential.

Caution to the Unfortunate.

Beware of the San Francisco quacks and pretenders who, with bogus sworn-to certificates, dupe the unwary. Some of the self styled doctors, whose names are to be found in the daily and weekly newspapers of San Francisco and other places, are tradesmen and became too lazy to work at their trades. Some are tinsmiths, shoemakers, newspaper carriers, intelligence office keepers, etc. The only way to avoid imposition is to make inquiry—it will cost you nothing, and may save you many regrets, for, as advertising physicians in eight cases out of ten are bogus, there is no safety in trusting any of them until you know who and what they are. Dr Gibbon does not deceive people by exhibiting bogus titles, certificates, pretended patients' letters, etc. Dr Gibbon will satisfy persons who may call at his offices of his ability to treat diseases that he proposes to cure.

Address DR. J. F. GIBBON, 623 Kearney street, corner Commercial, San Francisco, Post Office Box 1,957.

REMEMBER TO PUT BOX 1,957 ON THE LETTER.

Consultations FREE.

Correspondents will please inform DR. GIBBON that they read his advertisement in the Daily Oregonian.
